This project is designed for emerging and established interior designers seeking advanced expertise in environmentally responsible design and innovation. You'll engage with real-world challenges, such as adaptive reuse, low-impact interventions and the transformation of existing buildings that respond intelligently to complex interior environments.

Guided by Collarts design experts and industry mentors, you'll apply lifecycle thinking, circular economy principles and regenerative design strategies using contemporary tools and performance metrics. Graduate with a sophisticated portfolio demonstrating environmentally intelligent interiors aligned with industry standards, preparing you for roles in sustainable practice, consultancy, adaptive reuse and interdisciplinary design teams.

Narrative Environments Design Project

Specialise in spatial storytelling and the creation of immersive, narrative-driven environments across exhibition, performance, public and community contexts. In this project, you'll translate stories into spatial form through real-world contexts, such as exhibitions, scenographic installations, pop-ups and community-led spaces.

Guided by educators, curators, and industry professionals, you'll collaborate with artists, writers, technologists and fabricators to develop narrative frameworks, sensory and interactive design, scenography and technical documentation.
